Market Commentary

Indian benchmark indices managed to extend the winning momentum for the fourth consecutive day and settled at fresh closing highs on Tuesday, as arrival of monsoon rains cheers, but the gains were capped as the investors booked profit in recent outperformers. The monsoon, which delivers about 70% of India's annual rainfall, arrived at the southern Kerala coast today, in line with forecasts, brightening the outlook for higher farm output and robust economic growth. Simultaneously, the onset is also likely over Lakshadweep, coastal Karnataka, some parts of Tamil Nadu and most parts of northeastern states in the next 24 hours. Despite settling with only two tens of a percent gains, the frontline indices managed to outclass all the peers in Asia and Europe by quite a margin. The global markets continued to exhibit somber trends as investors at large remained cautious on worries about a Greek bailout and the possibility of an early election in Italy.

On the global front, concerns about a Greek bailout, early Italian elections and comments by the European Central Bank chief about the need for continued stimulus, sapped risk appetite, weighing on Asian markets and lifting safe havens including the yen and gold, though trading was thin with several markets closed for holidays. Sentiments remained downbeat on the report that North Korean leader Kim Jong-un supervised the test of a new ballistic missile controlled by a precision guidance system and ordered the development of more powerful strategic weapons.
